Meyer Najem Construction Wins Coveted “Crystal Eagle” Safety Award

(Fishers, IN) - April 20, 2011 - The Metro Indianapolis Coalition for Construction Safety (MICCS) has awarded Meyer Najem with the Safety Achievement and Safety Leader award for the General Contractor Below 300,000 Man Hours, Zero Injury Award and the Excellence in Safety Crystal Eagle Award. The Crystal Eagle award is the highest honor within the industry that MICCS can bestow upon a company. Companies vie in categories with their peers (Electrical, General Contractors, Owners and Facilities Maintenance, Mechanical, Specialty, and Construction Manager/ Developer). The winner of each category is then in contention for the “Crystal Eagle.”

LR: Justin Barnhart, Scott Grimes, Executive Director of MICCS, Lori Torres, Commissioner, Indiana Department of Labor, Rob Lawyer, Karl Meyer, Andrew Habel, Traci Hardin, Sam Mishelow and Anthony LaFata

“The Crystal Eagle signifies the alignment of Meyer Najem’s values with those of other industry leaders, which is: It is everyone's responsibility to assist in creating a working environment that sends our craftsmen and women home safely to their families every day,” said Karl Meyer, Chairman of Meyer Najem. “It represents the passions of our Safety Director, Traci Hardin who has worked tirelessly in raising awareness and challenging every individual to be safety minded as well as our executive team, managers, trades and crafts who have bought into the concept. This award is a tribute to the early adopters of MICCS and honors those like Gary Price, who among others, sought to address the dangers and human element in our industry. We appreciate the opportunity to serve our industry and to be recognized for our efforts, but realize we must remain vigilant and focused on our daily challenge of jobsite safety.”
